

Mark Butler
President Cigna New England

Mark Butler became president of Cigna Healthcare of New England in January of 2015. He is responsible for new customer growth and client retention, management of all hospital and physician contracting relationships, and the expansion of the value-based Cigna Collaborative Care model across New England. During his 15 years with Cigna, Butler has served in various senior leadership positions in sales and client management.

“Cigna is recognized nationally as a leader that helps improve the health and well-being of the customers it serves. In New England and throughout the country, the company is committed to building strong collaborative partnerships with hospitals and physicians focused on improving health and delivering high-quality affordable care,” Butler said. “When we provide doctors and hospitals with actionable clinical data, and when we use incentives to promote healthy behavior, we can create the best path to improved health and productivity.”

Butler has more than 39 years of experience in the health care industry. Prior to joining Cigna he held leadership positions in sales, marketing and operations at UnitedHealthcare, Tufts Health Plan and The Travelers.

Butler holds a Bachelor’s of Science degree in Economics from Siena College. He is also a graduate of the Executive Leadership Development Program at the University of Virginia, Darden School of Management. Butler and his wife Millie reside in Westborough, Massachusetts. They have two children.
