The Massachusetts Business Roundtable - a public policy organization comprised of CEOs and Senior Executives from large employers across the Commonwealth - today announced the hiring of Lauren Nwagboli as Director of Operations. As Director of Operations, Lauren will manage administrative operations, membership resources, and events, while also working with the President & CEO and the Executive Vice President to support the Roundtable's public policy agenda and priorities. Prior to joining the Roundtable, Lauren served as Deputy Director of the Workforce Solutions Group, where she managed all day-to-day operations, stakeholder engagement, and helped to plan, lead, and execute the Workforce Solutions Group's premier annual workforce summit that attracts over 200 attendees.

"We are excited to welcome Lauren to the Roundtable team," said JD Chesloff, President & CEO of the Roundtable. "We have worked closely with Lauren over the past two years as she helped to lead the Workforce Solutions Group. With operations and communications as an underlying theme throughout her career, Lauren previously was a Program Associate for the Kendall Square Association (KSA), a business membership association in Cambridge, where she led and managed programs and served as the point person for policy and government relations. Prior to that, Lauren has held various roles in operations and communications for Edtech startup companies.

"I am thrilled to join the Roundtable team," said Lauren Nwagboli, Director of Operations at the Roundtable. "I look forward to working with our members and
